Update: 2025-26 Work and Holiday (Subclass 462) Visa Caps

As of July 2025, the Australian Government has introduced revised annual caps for first-time Work and Holiday (subclass 462) visas, with limits varying by country. These caps are set by the Department of Home Affairs at the beginning of each program year, which runs from 1 July to 30 June.

Countries such as Argentina and Chile still have places available, while some others have already reached their caps and had applications paused. A notable update this year is the increase in Indonesia's cap, which has risen from 1,500 to 5,000—reflecting stronger cooperation and growing demand.

For high-demand countries like China, India, and Vietnam, a ballot system has been introduced. Applicants must register, and selected individuals will be invited to apply in phases until 30 April 2026. This new process is designed to manage demand more fairly and improve transparency.

Second and third Work and Holiday visas remain uncapped and available to eligible applicants.

Please see below for the latest country-by-country cap status.

SUCCESSFUL STORY FROM PE GLOBAL CLIENT

In our last newsletter, we highlighted how choosing a course in a high-demand occupation can be a strategic pathway to gaining permanent residency (PR) in Australia. Today, we're excited to share a real success story from one of our clients.

Romain came to Australia on a student visa (subclass 500) and enrolled in a Certificate III in Carpentry — a trade currently in high demand. After completing his course and gaining valuable work experience, he reached out to PE Global for support with the next steps. We helped him apply for a Temporary Graduate visa (subclass 485), which allowed him to continue working while waiting for his skills assessment.

Once his skills assessment was successfully approved, we proceeded to lodge applications for both the subclass 189 (Skilled Independent) and subclass 190 (Skilled Nominated) visas. Just three weeks later, Romain received an invitation to apply for the South Australian state nomination — putting him well on his way to achieving PR.

If you're currently on a temporary visa and thinking about your long-term future in Australia, this could be your sign to explore study and skilled migration pathways.

NEWSLETTER HOT TIPS

On a Working Holiday visa and looking for a job or your next opportunity? Don't forget to include your visa subclass and expiry date on your CV.

Why it matters:

- Builds trust: Shows you're clear and professional about your work rights.
- Speeds up hiring: Employers can quickly see if you're eligible.
- Keeps you in the running: Missing visa info may get your CV skipped.
- Opens sponsorship doors: Transparency can lead to long-term opportunities like the 482 visa.
